BA in Psychology

Chicago State University has a longstanding mission to provide a diverse group of students with access to quality higher education. This access prepares students to meet their educational goals and make meaningful contributions to their communities. Chicago State University's current mission documents reaffirm this distinctive goal, underscoring the institution's dedication to social justice and leadership, and declaring a new focus on community development through entrepreneurship.

Program Overview

The Psychology Department at Chicago State University provides a broad education aimed to prepare students for advanced study in psychology or entry-level employment in the social sciences. The department has an enduring commitment to and a proud legacy of serving underrepresented populations. Our department fosters the intellectual development and success of its students through a rigorous, positive, and affirming educational experience. We are committed to teaching, research, service, and community development. The faculty is committed to using scientific methods to serve urban populations. We are committed to viewing psychology through the prism and principle of cultural influence, social justice, and inclusivity. The psychology program is a dynamic department within the University and is true to CSU's mission of providing access to higher education for students of diverse backgrounds and educational needs. The psychology department seeks to recruit, retain and educate students from diverse backgrounds with an emphasis, and focus on teaching, serving, and researching students and populations within an urban environment
