

HOMEWORK

These materials belong to Chicago State University, and may be accessed by contacting the person in charge of the room where they are located, or through the Teachers' Writing & Resource Center, ED 111
As of 9/9/04

The following materials are available in the Middle School Library, right side of computer lab, in the Teachers' Writing & Resource Center, ED 111

Adjustable assignment brainstorming bash p76. IN Differentiated instructional strategies: one size doesn't fit all Gregory, Gayle H. et al

Adjustable assignments: what are they? P58-63. IN Differentiated instructional strategies: one size doesn't fit all Gregory, Gayle H. et al

Article evaluation worksheet.

Checklist for helping your child with homework (chart)

Homework – is a new direction needed? P45-48. IN As I see it. Lounsbury, John H. National Middle School Association, 1991.

Homework overload called a myth: Kids typically get less than an hour a night, studies say. Feller, Ben. Associated Press.

Research links. File://A:\Write%20Research%20Links.htm

Studies agree: Homework load light: Less than an hour a night is typical for high school students. Rossi, Rosalind. Sun-Times, 10/1/03 p6

Higgins, Lowell (photograph)

How much homework? (table). Brown Center Report on American Education, 2003, citing National Assessment of Education Progress 1999 long-term trend reading summary data tables.

The following materials are available in the VIDEO CABINET in the Teachers' Writing & Resource Center, ED 111

Assigning effective homework (videotape). Bernstein, David, Sadler, Cathy, Rutan, Shawn & Wallace, Judy. Excellence in teaching series. Teacher's Video Co. 27 min.

The following materials are available in the Teacher Preparation Library, bottom shelf, left side, main room, Teachers' Writing & Resource Center, ED 111

Hands-on homework for introductory science: Supplementing lecture-oriented teaching. Singh, Chandralekha. P126-131 IN Journal of college science teaching, 32 (2), Oct. 2002

The following materials are available in the MATH LIBRARY in the sixth and seventh cabinets from the left in ED 200

After math intermediate homework practice review (Duplicate Masters) Klawitter, Pamela. Timesavers for Teachers 1982.